After completing grade 12 at St Bede's College, I went on to study a Bachelor of Science at Monash University with many of my fellow students. During my studies at Monash University, I developed an interest in Physiotherapy from various personal sporting injuries, and decided to pursue a Bachelor of Physiotherapy with Honours at The University of Queensland.

I worked in sports during my time at University and spent my first two years out of uni working in private practice, involved in club and school sports. I had an intra-profession pivot late last year into the field of Occupational Physiotherapy where I work as a Physiotherapist & Rehabilitation consultant. Day to day I am onsite at large companies such as Coles, Volvo and Virgin Airlines. I provide assessment and treatment of musculoskeletal injuries as well as being proactive in the workplace to reduce the risk of injuries so people can remain at work.

My time at St Bede's showed me the value of hard work and being authentic to yourself, as well as the courage to explore the unknown. I have fond memories of Cross country runs along Mentone beach and many of my most meaningful friendships to this day have been formed during high school. All the support from the teachers and community at St Bede's has been integral in giving me a solid foundation to approach life.

Nic has been working as a Brand Manager for Atomic Fashion Marketing, where he has worked with major brands like Santa Cruz, Creature, OJ's and Ricta.

Below is a short clip from the opening night of a recent project for Speed Wheels / Santa Cruz 50th Anniversary.

"The Art of Speed Wheels"

Growing up, Nic idolised Jim Phillips artwork and the aesthetics of the NHS brands. Being able to work within their team and share their history, while playing a part in a milestone event, was a surreal moment for Nic.

Thank you for the story Nic – we can't wait to see what you do next.
